DETAILED ACTION

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments filed 07 August 2006 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

Applicant alleges:

"It is submitted that Claim 1 clearly transforms or converts an input signal at an input sample rate to one of a plurality of differing intended output sample rates. A practical application of this physical transformation is, for example, shown in Figure 6 which shows a block diagram of a sample rate converter, and in Figure 5 which shows a signal processing system."

Examiner respectfully disagrees. There is no physical transformation, merely a manipulation of digital data. This does not constitute a physical transformation.

Applicant further alleges to show a useful, concrete and tangible result:

"Clearly, in the claim 1, when viewed as a whole, an input signal at an input sample rate is converted to an output signal at a different sample rate."

Examiner respectfully disagrees. This output is not a useful, concrete and tangible result but merely the result of the conversion process.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 101

35 U.S.C. 101 reads as follows:

Art Unit: 2615

Whoever invents or discovers any new and useful process, machine, manufacture, or composition of matter, or any new and useful improvement thereof, may obtain a patent therefor, subject to the conditions and requirements of this title.

Claims 1 – 33 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 101 because the claimed invention is directed to non-statutory subject matter.

Claims 1 – 16 are directed toward a method for converting an input signal. The various steps in the methods set forth in the claims are nothing more than steps performed on a computer thus making them an abstract idea; see pages 23 and 58 of the interim guidelines regarding 101 rejections.

The interim guidelines detail two ways to make an abstract idea statutory:

- 1.) The claimed invention “transforms” an article or physical object to a different state or thing.
- 2.) The claimed invention otherwise produces a useful, concrete and tangible result...

Claims 1 – 16 do not transform an article or physical object to a different state or thing. The transformation in claims 1 – 16 is merely a manipulation of data, not a physical object. The claims also do not provide a useful tangible output. The output in claims 1 – 16 are merely the result of the processes. No practical application is claimed. See page 19 of the interim guidelines.

Claims 17 – 33 are directed toward a computer program product for converting a digital signals. The code is merely an abstract idea as further detailed above regarding claims 1 – 16. The various code in the claims is not encoded on a computer readable storage medium as required on pages 52 and 53 of the interim guidelines.

Conclusion

THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL. Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
